Funny Pages

NOW that the New Year is well on its way and you've all had a chance to break your good resolutions the editors of FUNNY PAGES want to give you a bit of advice:

Don't go out in wet weather without your rubbers.

Don't be afraid of ghosts—there aren't any. (If we had our way we'd abolish all of them.)

Don't hide all the hairbrushes and straps around the house before you give Dad your report card. (Put a book in your trousers—it works better. (Ask us—we were young once.)

Remember, children should be seen and not heard. When you read your copy of FUNNY PAGES be sure to go off in another room. If your parents hear you laughing too much they might think you had a bad case of dementia praecox. (We don't know what it is either—it just sounds good.)

And above all, don't pay more than ten cents for your copy of our magazine.

Now that we've told you what to do. Suppose you tell us what to do. Which comics do you like best? Which are the ones that pop the buttons off your vest and which are the ones that pop the buttons off your shirt? Which comics shall we run more of?

In the office here we've made a resolution to give you the best in the way of fun, humor and comedy. We might even go so far as to tickle the ribs of the artists—so that they too, will feel funny. This is no laughing matter. We're serious. We want to be funny.

So all in all we've turned over a new leaf. And now we suppose you ought to, too. For on the new leaf is the first page of Dickie Duck. Dickie is sound asleep. Let's both take a peek at him

With best wishes . . .

Natural History

THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN GOAT

For a century after it might have been known to white men the Rocky Mountain Goat was a creature of mystery. A few skins found their way to civilization, but were considered to be from white buffalo or polar bears. Indians wove the goat's wool into fine cloth and this too, was known to the fur traders, but the wool was thought to have been produced by a species of mountain sheep. However hunters and naturalists finally found the animal in the highest, most rugged mountains of Canada and the States along the border. Today, fortunately, Rocky Mountain Goats still inhabit their original range in fair numbers under adequate protection. He who hunts the white goat must make a long journey and do much mountaineering.

The Rocky Mountain Goat in early summer makes a complete change of coat. The long warm combination of wool and hair which was proof against sub-zero temperature is shed completely. It is replaced by a close coat of white wool which gives its wearer a comical, close-clipped appearance.

So high is the chosen home of the Rocky Mountain Goat that eagles, not predatory animals, are the principle natural enemy, attacking the kids and sometimes getting them in the mother's absence.

By Howard L. Hastings

Distinguished American Animal Artist

The Rocky Mountain Goat often assumes odd attitudes, one of which is to sit up like a begging dog.

The Persian Wild Goat is one of the ancestors of the domestic "billy" goat.

AERONAUTICAL ADVISORY SERVICE

by Captain Raymond Clark

EDITOR'S NOTE:

This department, piloted by Captain Clark, is an open forum for all readers of this magazine. Captain Clark will endeavor to answer any questions regarding the field of aircraftmanship. If you have a problem of some sort about planes, motors records or routes write the captain a letter. All inquiries will be answered in this department; no replies by mail.

HYAH fellers, I've been out to Chicago for a few days looking over their airport, hangars and equipment, and I'll tell you it's one of the world's busiest airports. All the major lines stop there, in addition to several smaller companies whose flites originate there and act as feeders for the large transcontinental runs. Chicago is really the nation's crossroad for air travel. Eastern, western, northern, and southern air routes meet there and from 150 to 200 takeoffs and landings are made every day.

This summer, passenger travel increased to a point where they handled from 4000 to 5000 passengers every weekend. Now that's what I call an up-and-coming business, so you fellows who are interested in aviation can see what is before you in the way of opportunity. It's up to you to take advantage of it and to be prepared to take your place in it.

I really would like to see more of our boys interested in the sidelines of aviation, such as radio, meterology (weather man) and traffic.

These are the jobs which at present are filled by men who came in from outside industries and did not grow up with aviation.

Our radio men, for instance, came from the ocean lines, and our traffic men from the railroads. The weather men come with us as soon as they are out of college and adopt themselves to the routine in a fairly short time.

If a boy who is air minded would check over these sidelines and give each one a little serious thought, I'm sure some of you fellows would see the advantage of these branches, in which there is really a shortage of men who know the business.

Well, I must answer some of these letters now. Here's one from Wichita, Kansas:

Dear Capt. Clark:

I am twelve years old and in 7th grade in school. I like airplanes and go down to the airport every chance I get. One thing I would like to know is how the pilots on large airplanes can tip them over in the air, that is one wing seems to go down when they go around the field after taking off. Isn't this dangerous?

Emory Castles.

No, this isn't dangerous, Emory. It's very necessary to tip or "bank" a plane when it is making a turn. This is done by moving the ailerons and the rudder when making a turn and if the ship isn't banked it would skid in the air and make a very much wider circle when turning.

Memphis, Tennessee

Capt. Clark
New York

I read in a magazine recently where army and navy planes are built much stronger than private airplanes.

I can't see any good reason for this, private planes carry very heavy loads sometimes, and army planes only have one or two pilots in them at the most. Hoping you will explain this I am,

Antonio DePasco

Well, Tony, it's not very hard to figure out if you understand that an airplane is under a strain every time it turns or banks in the air.

In a private ship the turns and banks are made slowly and at very little pressure or strain to the wings and tail surfaces. In the military plane, however, the sharp maneuvering and stunting at high speed that is required of them in "dogfights" and war games places a tremendous strain on the entire ship.

One of the tests for the new army Northrops is a power dive of 10,000 feet. In this test the strain is so great that the test pilot wears a special harness to keep his body from bulging when he pulls the ship out of the dive. I hope this explains it, Tony.

More air news and questions answered next month.

SWAPPERS' MART

THIS is the great national trading center for all readers of this magazine. You don't have to be a subscriber. I though we'd like to have you, of course. This department is free to you. If you have something that may still be interesting to someone else and you'd like to swap it with another reader, just write out your ad and send it to the Chief Trader, FUNNY PAGES, 11 West 42nd Street, New York, N. Y. There is no charge for printing your ad, but the publishers warn all readers that they accept no responsibility in any transaction. This department is maintained without profit. No "sales" ads will be accepted, and no dealers' ads will be used. If you are a "real swapper" don't ask for current coins in exchange, and don't ask readers to send a stamp for list. Be honest. Don't write ads in pencil or on postcards, and don't use more than 40 words including your name and address.

Will send 25 different U.S. Stamps and 25 different foreign countries for two (2) Liberty Head nickels (not Buffalo). Approvals if requested. Ted Bratland, 4349 4th Avenue, S. Minneapolis, Minn.

For every 15 U.S. Commemoratives stamps you send me I will send you 10 mixed stamps. Ed Bischof, 122 Wade Street, Jersey City, N.J.

Have stamps to trade. Send for Ed D. Roberts, 1127 E. 20th Ave., Vancouver, B.C. Canada.

Have five Big Little Books, 10 Airplane books, and 15 comic books, all with covers. What have you? Charles Craig, 115 E. Monroe St., Jacksonville, Florida.

Want postcard views, Snapshot views, stamps and comic books. What do you want? Some things I have are camera, coins, and stamps. M. E. Moore, 34 Payne Street, Dover, N.H.

Will trade Don Sturdy, Poppy Ott, and other books. Want finger print set or what have you? Write. All books in good condition. Robert Willardson, Gunnison, Utah.

Have $3.00 Chemistry set, two air rifles, stamps, books, good ice skates with box toes. I want camera, woodburner, crystal set, or what have you? Robert Weber, 1713 Lakelton Road, Wilkinsburg, Pa.

STAMP COLLECTORS

By Prof. Phillip S. Pace

OUR PRESIDENT RE-ELECT SAYS:

"THE best thing about stamp collecting," says President Roosevelt, "is that the enthusiasm which it arouses in youth increases as the years pass. It dispels boredom, enlarges our vision, broadens our knowledge of geography and in innumerable ways enriches life and adds to its joy."

SYMPHONIES IN CONCRETE

"Today in Germany we write poems in steel and symphonies in concrete," said a modern German writer in a recent essay exalting the Nazi ideal. And as if in confirmation of his statement, the nine values of the "Winter Help" semi-postals were designed to honor modern German triumphs in practical concrete engineering. On the 3pf + 2pf brown is a view of the new concrete highway from the southern frontier near Munich. The 6pf + 4pf green pictures a lofty concrete bridge over the Saale River in Saxony, and on the 12pf + 6pf red is another modern bridge against a background of Alpine scenery. Still a third bridge, this one spanning the Mangfall, appears on the 25pf + 15 pf blue.

ILLUSTRATION FROM H. E. HARRIS & CO., DENTON

Each of the above four stamps has on the left-hand margin the inscription "Reichsautobahn" which means "National Automobile Highway." It is perhaps significant that Germany is the only country in Europe which has lifted the crushing taxes on automobile owners. Shrewd observers say that Hitler realizes the tremendous value of the automobile in modern warfare and is boosting automobile sales so that in a national emergency all cars can be confiscated to transport soldiers to the front along the new strategic highways. In the face of these militaristic implications, the charitable purpose of the new stamps seems a little ironical.

SHIP STAMPS FROM URUGUAY

Collectors who specialize in stamps showing various kinds of ships will be interested in this recent issue from Uruguay which pictures an old-time clipper ship cutting across the bows of a modern ocean liner. The stamps are intended to be used for paying the special fee exacted on mail posted after a certain hour. There are six values: 1c green, 5c violet, 6c deep green, 7c brown, 8c carmine lake, and 12c deep blue.

THE UGLIEST STAMPS OF 1936

Six stamps have recently been issued by the French government to commemorate the International Exposition which is to be held at Paris this year. The design on the four lower values, 20c violet, 30c green, 40c blue, and 50c orange red, is apparently intended to represent the god Mercury in the act of blowing a trumpet. The shading has been so unskillfully applied, however, that the resulting figure looks like a half-starved and under-privileged schoolboy from the slums of New York. Even less successful is the design on the two higher values, 90c rose and 1.50fr blue, where a grimy hand-drawing aside a curtain reveals what appears to be a globe surrounded by stars.

ILLUSTRATION FROM H. E. HARRIS & CO., DENTON

Judging from some of the comments made by the philatelic press, these strange productions bid fair to capture the title of the Year's Ugliest Stamps. "We have seen some ridiculous designs in our day," remarks the disgusted editor of "L'Echangeur Universel," "but never yet has the hideous lack of French philatelic originality been presented to the eyes of the least experienced with more force than by this effeminate, indefinite and altogether frightful Mercury which adorns the present issue."

THE FINNY FAMILY

by ELLIS EDWARDS

TROPICAL fish are becoming more and more popular every year. Among hobbies the keeping and breeding of these gay little creatures is one of the most interesting, and, if taken up in the sensible manner, not at all expensive.

A small tank of tropical fish in the home, whether it be a tiny, compact room-and-bath apartment in a crowded city or a large house in the suburbs, can be a source of much entertainment, even profit if managed well.

In establishing this "Finny Family" department in Funny Pages it is our hope to be of help. This page will furnish readers with pointers and tips on the various breeds of the finny tribe, their habits and how to keep them healthy and happy. If you have any questions about tank fish write us a letter and we'll try to answer you. All letters will be handled in the order received and as space permits.

And now for starting your tank. Let us assume that you are an amateur, that this is all new to you.

Never put your fish in a round tank because a round tank draws heat like a magnifying glass when it is placed in the sun. A square tank always! You can get a good tank for two dollars at a pet store. When buying it be sure to look inside to see that the glass sides of the tank meet in the corners because a gap through which the metal holder might come in contact with the water will produce a poison that kills the fish.

A ten gallon tank will be large enough to keep fifteen to twenty tropical fish in healthy condition. This size should fit nicely on a window ledge in your room, or on a small table.

Soak the tank thoroughly in a strong solution of rock salt before you use it. Then spread a two inch layer of river sand or gravel over the bottom, into which you stick eight or ten sprouts of VALLISNERIA or SAGITTARIA plants. Over the plants and sand you place a sheet of heavy brown paper and allow water to run in slowly to within three or four inches from the top.

Let this stand four or five days.

If you have followed these simple directions you will possess a well balanced tank in readiness for your little tropical friends.
